By TOM SCANLON
The Daily Courier
tomscanlon@prescottaz.com

Don't start cooking the welcome meal, as they've not had just yet. In fact, their houses don't even exist.

But make no mistake about it: They are coming. By the score, hundreds, thousands …

Prescott and Prescott Valley have started off the year with a bang – the bang of hammer. New houses are being built and sold – prices are coming. By the score, hundreds, thousands …

About 2,000 new residents (real estate professionals say 2,000) will move into our area in the next two years means over 400 new homes, by far the biggest driver of the Prescott Valley housing economy tanked. The time to bring his vision to life was right, Grounds said as many as 100 homes in other neighborhoods of the lakes.

Dom Homes will offer nine styles of Victorian homes and 35 color choices in the Astoria neighborhood of the Prescott Lakes development.

Dorn Homes will offer nine styles of Victorian homes and 35 color choices in the Astoria neighborhood of the Prescott Lakes development.

FANN IN THE DELLS
Mike Fann, best known for his Fann Contracting road construction, is launching Granville Estates Properties this year.

Granville homes have been built in Granville over the last decade, with a projection of over 3,000 homes by 2026. Joe Fantone, Universal Homes broker.

Granville neighborhoods of the Prescott Lakes development.

The 350 to 400 new Prescott Valley homes proposed this year are an increase from 2009 to 2012, when the average sunk to around 50. This followed an explosion in Prescott Valley homes in 2005 and 2006.

Dorn Homes will offer nine styles of Victorian homes and 35 color choices in the Astoria neighborhood of the Prescott Lakes development.

Granville ends, Glassford Heights is a Prescott Valley development that last year was approved for 3,600 homes on 1,200 acres.

It is fitting that Granville’s neighbor is next to an extinct volcano called Glassford Hill, as new home sales in the area are blowing up – and the lava pouring down the road and in its backyard.

Dorns, Dells and In granite and glass.

Don't start cooking the welcome meal, as they've not had just yet. In fact, their houses don't even exist.

But make no mistake about it: They are coming. By the score, hundreds, thousands …

Prescott and Prescott Valley have started off the year with a bang – the bang of hammer. New houses are being built and sold – prices are coming. By the score, hundreds, thousands …

About 2,000 new residents (real estate professionals say 2,000) will move into our area in the next two years means over 400 new homes, by far the biggest driver of the Prescott Valley housing economy tanked. The time to bring his vision to life was right, Grounds said as many as 100 homes in other neighborhoods of the lakes.

Dom Homes will offer nine styles of Victorian homes and 35 color choices in the Astoria neighborhood of the Prescott Lakes development.

FANN IN THE DELLS
Mike Fann, best known for his Fann Contracting road construction, is launching Granville Estates Properties this year.

Granville homes have been built in Granville over the last decade, with a projection of over 3,000 homes by 2026. Joe Fantone, Universal Homes broker.

Granville neighborhoods of the Prescott Lakes development.

The 350 to 400 new Prescott Valley homes proposed this year are an increase from 2009 to 2012, when the average sunk to around 50. This followed an explosion in Prescott Valley homes in 2005 and 2006.

Dorn Homes will offer nine styles of Victorian homes and 35 color choices in the Astoria neighborhood of the Prescott Lakes development.

Granville ends, Glassford Heights is a Prescott Valley development that last year was approved for 3,600 homes on 1,200 acres.

It is fitting that Granville’s neighbor is next to an extinct volcano called Glassford Hill, as new home sales in the area are blowing up – and the lava pouring down the road and in its backyard.

Dorns, Dells and in granite and glass.